

Challenge-led Grants

Grants to support interdisciplinary research consortia addressing global challenges facing developing countries

The UK National Academies (The Academy of Medical Sciences, The British Academy, The Royal Academy of Engineering and The Royal Society) have launched a call for interdisciplinary Challenge-led Grants with a focus on resilience, as part of the Global Challenges Research Fund.

The awards will support interdisciplinary Research Consortia across all academic disciplines to develop and lead interdisciplinary research projects which focus on developing new approaches to significant and complex resilience problems facing developing countries. The Research Consortia will consist of one UK research group and two research groups from developing countries.

Each award provides 2.5 years of support with an award value of up to £500,000. The funding can be used for research expenses, equipment, travel, networking costs, and training and skills development.

Deadline for application is Wednesday 11 September 2018 3pm UK time.

For more information and to apply please visit royalsociety.org/challenge-led-grants

For general enquiries about the programme please contact ChallengeGrants@royalsociety.org